

Acknowledgements

The past four years at MIT have been an immensely rewarding educational and intellectual experience. Much of the credit for this must go to my adviser Professor Stephen C. Graves. Interacting with Steve has developed my analytical skills more than I could have imagined. Observing Steve, both in the class room and in meetings, has taught me that clarity of expression is rooted in a deep and thorough understanding of the subject matter at hand. This is an insight I will always remember.

I am extremely grateful for Steve's contributions to my research. This thesis is immeasurably better as a result of his comments. Much credit also goes to Professors Georgia Perakis and Yashan Wang, the other members of my committee. Their feedback has been invaluable. I would also like to thank Professor Andreas Schulz for his helpful comments.

My time at MIT has been greatly enriched by all my fellow Operations Management and System Dynamics doctoral students. Hari Abhyankar, Sharon Novak and Sean Willems deserve special mention. The four of us spent considerable time and energy pursuing our doctorates. I'm glad to say that we have all succeeded, in no small part because of the friendship that we developed over the years. I look forward to hearing of the graduations of Amit, Ariel, Juan Carlos, Laura, Paulo G., Paulo O. and René.

I would especially like to thank my great friends Jeffrey Furman and Martin Haugh for the afternoon breaks in Au Bon Pain and the enjoyable evenings in Grafton Street. I can only hope that in the years to come we will continue our conversations, even if distance makes them less frequent.

I would also like to thank both the Montgomery family and the O'Shea family for their frequent hospitality.

I owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to my parents Breffni and Nollaig and to my sisters Aoife and Dervla. The frequent weekend conversations were always eagerly anticipated, especially the conversations with my nieces Maeve, Ciara and Fiona. I look forward to talking with my nephew Kevin when he's a little older. The encouragement I received, not only from my immediate family, but also from my brothers-in-law Bryan and Daniel, was very valuable.

Finally I want to thank Sarah Montgomery for all her support over the past few years. Sarah has put up with the long hours that I have spent in my office with incredible patience and good will. I am eternally grateful to her. I can only hope to repay her in the coming years.

This page intentionally left blank

To my parents, Breffni and Nollaig Tomlin

This page intentionally left blank