

ABSTRACT

Septa Algia, ...

The Relationship between Parenting Parents and Peers with Premarital Sex Behavior at SMK Harapan Bangsa Cimanggis Depok in 2020.

Teenagers often do things that deviate from the law and norms prevailing in society. One of the deviant behaviors committed by adolescents in Indonesia is premarital sexual behavior. This study aims to determine the relationship between parenting parents and peers with premarital sex behavior at SMK Harapan Bangsa Cimanggis Depok in 2020. The design of this study uses a quantitative approach with a cross-sectional research design. The population in this school is 766 students whose sample is 130 will be taken by simple random sampling. Analysis of the data used is univariate analysis and bivariate analysis. The results obtained are the majority of respondents who have parenting parents who are not at risk and not at risk of having premarital sexual behavior. The majority of respondents are dominated by respondents who have the role of peers in the category of not at risk and not at risk of having premarital sexual behavior. The relationship between parenting parents with premarital sexual behavior was not statistically significant and the relationship between the role of peers with premarital sex behavior was statistically significant.

Keywords: Parenting style, the role of peers, premarital sex behavior