Indonesia is a country that has abundant natural resources and has a variety of cultures and indigenous tribes. In certain areas such as Kalimantan, to be more precise, the Dayak tribe they use lantung bark as material for making traditional clothes and also in that area lantung bark is widely used as a material for making handicrafts. In improving the quality and design of handicrafts, the design of handicraft products is basically inseparable from cultural and environmental phenomena as well as spiritual values. Therefore, innovation is needed in the use of hanging bark by applying it to shoe design. Then by adding patchwork waste as a material for making, it can still preserve Indonesian culture and preserve the environment by utilizing cloth waste that exists on this earth.
