Study Program : S1 Management

This study aims to determine how much influence Work-Family Conflict has on Turnover Intention with Socioemotional Wealth as a Moderation Variable for private employees who are married and work in family companies, especially in West Jakarta. The data analysis technique used simple linear regression analysis. Samples were taken as many as 100 respondents, namely private employees who are married and work in the family company but their status is not a member of the company family. Determination of the sample using purposive sampling technique.

Based on the results of the study, it can be concluded that (a) Work-family Conflict has a positive effect on Turnover Intention (b) Socioemotional Wealth has a positive effect as a moderator between Work-family Conflict on Turnover Intention in company employees.

The suggestion from this research is that employees are expected to be closer to their families so that they are given support and enthusiasm so that the time between work and family can be divided properly and the company pays more attention to assigning tasks and completing tasks according to their portion, so that employees are not burdened with pressure working time so that employees feel more comfortable in the company and the level of turnover intention can be reduced.
