

ESA UNGGUL UNIVERSITY
FACULTY OF HEALTH-SCIENCE
PROFESSION NURSING PROGRAMME
Case Study Report, 20 July 2016

Fitria Abubakar
2015-35-002

"NURSING IN PATIENTS ON STROKE TREATMENT WITH MUCOSITIS USING HONEY IN THE SIX FLOOR OF PRESIDENTIAL HOSPITAL RSPAD GATOT
SOEBROTO JAKARTA"

Chapter xvii + 5 + 90 pages + 28 tables + 2 + 1 attachment

ABSTRACT

Mucositis is a state of mucosal inflammatory cells daluserasi. To overcome mucositis one of them is doing oral care using honey. Identify the effect of honey in oral care measures to cope with mucositis in patients with stroke. Using descriptive method that with the approach of the nursing process, the techniques used in data collection is by interview, physical examination and the results of observation. The results of the case study client's average sex male (100%), decreased consciousness (80%), CT-Scan (100%), mucositis (100%), impaired verbal communication (60%), impaired tissue perfusion cerebral (100%), damage to physical mobility (100%), self-care deficit (100%), impaired skin integrity (60%). The results of the analysis, there is a match between the theoretical overview of the application of medical surgical nursing care in general hospitals sixth floor care Keperesidenan Gatot Subroto Army Hospital. The hypothesis in this case study received so that it can be stated the use of honey in the treatment of oral mucositis on the client to resolve stroke.

Keywords : Oral care, mucositis, stroke